

RICH MEN SPONSOR CONVICTED BROKER, BUT NOT WITH CASH

Court Requires More Than Lip Service for Man Who Robbed Woman of $3,250.

James S. Rollow, fifty-eight, a stock broker of No. 269 Macdon Street, Brooklyn, was well represented by prosperous friends when he was arraigned before Judge Rosalsky in the Court of General Sessions today for sentence. He had pleaded guilty to misappropriating $3,250 entrusted to him for investment by Evelyn Blanchard, a playwright, of No. 256 West 97th Street.

The court had received a dozen letters from men of high standing in professional life in Brooklyn asking that Rollow be let off with a light sentence or a suspended sentence. The letters recited that he had been a credit to Brooklyn up to this time and undoubtedly would never offend again. Similar pleas were made by persons in court.

"But," asked Judge Rosalsky, "what about this young woman who has been defrauded? I am told the defendant cannot repay her a penny."

"Has he only lip service friends? Has he no friends who will go down into their pockets and help him repay his victim? It appears to me that these respectable people who ask that there shall be no punishment meted out to a man who has stolen $3,250 from a woman who has worked hard for every penny of it have a peculiar point of view."

Rollow's friends held a conference in the court room and asked that sentence be postponed until June 8. In the interval, they said, they will see if they can raise some money.

Miss Blanchard said that Rollow visited her in July, 1920, and said that he was grieved and shocked at the increasing wickedness and lack of religion of people in general. It was his desire, he said, to produce a play that would bring about a great moral awakening and eventually reform the world.

she had him arrested and he was indicted for grand larceny in the first degree.

FOUR HURT AS AUTO SMASHES ANOTHER

Driver of Zig-Zagging Car Arrested at Jamesport, L. I., Charged With Intoxication.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., May 31.—Four men were injured when an automobile owned by F. J. Hagen, driven by Robert Edwards, crashed into another automobile at Jamesport, L. I., last night. With Hagen, three men were in the second car, which, according to the police, was zig-zagging down the road, and Edwards turned far out to avoid it.

The cars came together, taking off one wheel of Hagen's car. The other car was overturned.

Joseph Kleka, Aleck Casper and Joseph Ziminiski, all of Greenport were injured. Ziminiski was treated for minor injuries, and arrested on a charge of intoxication.

Our SPECIAL ORDER DEPARTMENT FOR GIRLS AND JUNIORS

THE ONLY ONE IN THE CITY DEVOTED EXCLUSIVELY TO YOUNGER GIRLS

Specializes in the UNUSUAL in Size, Color, Material or Design

ANY mother who has her own ideas as to the color and material best suited to her school-girl daughter may have those ideas developed to her satisfaction here.

And the special order department will render her its greatest service in its sympathetic consideration of a young girl's immature figure and its ability to bring out her best points.

She may be too thin, too tall, too short, too stout—but a cleverly designed frock will hide these defects. She may look awkward and ill at ease in ready-made clothes, but clothes designed to fit her frame and suit her personality will give her assurance and comeliness.

The advice of our Experts is yours for the asking—

and you may command their services for very little more than you are accustomed to paying for ready-made garments.
